RESEARCH PLAN NOT COMPLETE

While the plan to raise a million dollars for medical research in Canada is a laudable one, it will not be complete until provision for industrial research is included in it.

There is no reason why both medical and industrial research could not be provided for under one comprehensive plan.

What really brings results in research work is not the labor of one or two brilliant subsidized scientists, but the steady plodding of many average ones.

Germany's record proves that fact. Germany never relied on the brilliant scientists for her discoveries. On the contrary she maintained armies of average chemists who cost the state little because any discovery they made was rewarded with a bonus. If only four per cent of them discovered anything of value, Germany got her money's worth.

Canada's problem of industrial and medical research can be solved along similar lines. What we want in this country is a post-graduate university of scientific research where the best graduates of Canadian universities could work for their doctor's degrees in science by doing original research work along directed lines. The brilliant fellows could form the staff and do the directing.

That million dollars talked about now would give the project a start. The government and Canadian firms that would provide the industrial research could surely be counted on to keep the thing going. And if the students of this post-graduate university had even half the success that German research workers have had, the sale of patents would more than support both industrial and medical branches of the institution.

EXPRESS RATES STRATEGY

No one should be deceived by the tactics of the Canadian express companies in asking the Railway Commission for a revision of rates upward. For the fact is that the express companies do not seriously expect any authorization for an advance. The whole purpose of presenting the application at this time is to forestall the effects of those in the West who have been preparing to ask for a revision of rates downward.

Upon the trend of rate revision following the next few years will depend the fate and prosperity of the express companies.

Express charges have reached such an altitude today that they are displacing other business instead of increasing it. By maintaining the present rates, the express companies put the creation of new business completely beyond their power.

Until rates are lowered, express business will continue to decrease and the problem of short-distance express transport will find a ready solution in the development of motor express.

If the Canadian express companies ever hope to achieve maximum prosperity or to render maximum service to the country they will have to let their rates go so that the people can afford to do business with them and so that charges will be attractive enough to create new business.

USING GAS IN WARFARE

Wisely the League of Nations has decided to include gas as a legal method of offense in warfare.

We say wisely because the League does not get out of its mind the possibility that the League is going to lose when war actually comes. It is

There is no other shaft in the city or perhaps in the United States. Delmonico's was never what it is now as a mere lobster palace. It did not enter to the sensational, though it did undoubtedly attract the illustrious. Yet it encouraged a man like Abe Harnish, the notorious divorce lawyer, who had a suite of rooms there, and as whose poker game on Saturday night thousands of dollars changed hands. But one like Abe did not offend the Delmonico, the Ward McAllisters or the Fred Gebards.

Delmonico Customs

The revelry was always well-bred. Delmonico's was always respectable. It had a pleasant way of its own for dealing with patron whose presence was not desired. When such a prospective diner appeared he was permitted to take his seat, but the sign was flashed around, and when a waiter took his order, he walked away and did not reappear. Then if another waiter was given the order, he too vanished. By this time the fact had dawned upon the baffled diner that his presence was unwanted, and usually he would walk away himself. The restaurant was always ready to give credit to a customer. He could let his account run for a month, but was expected to pay promptly when the account was rendered. If he did not pay he was not served. He merely lost the privilege of having a meal in Delmonico's, and since it was the centre of fashion, a disability was sufficient punishment. Nor would the restaurant permit dining rooms for two, and it is recalled that on this account Offenbach, the French composer, when he went to New York in the 18's to conduct his works, left the restaurant in a rage because he was denied a privilege which he understood to be one of the inherent rights of man.

The Haunt of Celebrities

Hardly celebrity went to New York but he had dined at Delmonico's. Lincoln had meals there. It was at Delmonico's that Morse, inventor of the telegraph, received the honors of the nation. In other words, Delmonico's was one of the most cherished institutions of New York city cosmopolitan without being rowdy, brilliant and Bohemian without being dissipated, where the work of fashion, finance, politics, sport and art mingled and exchanged polite salutations.

To say that every field for taxation has been explored is pure nonsense. Tax bill bonds for instance.

AN OPEN LETTER

The Board of Trade upper nest Wednesday (particulars of which will be found under Coming Events) should bring out a record turnout of taxpayers and residents, as Mayor McGeorge has been anxious to see some length of the financial condition of the town and the prospects for the future.

Interest in civic matters amongst the residents has been sadly lacking and during the last few years no Council, School or Hospital board would have had the proper support from the public to inspire them in their good work and help them in their many difficulties. We lack co-operation amongst ourselves and the sooner we put on outside our petty grievances or factions the better for the whole community.

Let us work in harmony as no town can prosper any other way.

The suggestion could be made, that all our public boards could more fully report the proceedings of their meetings in our local paper and this would give our residents a more complete understanding of their activities.

An opportunity will be given on Wednesday to hear the plain facts and the Town's present standing and our business men should not forget to be present.

Macleod and District Board of Trade, Secretary.

DELMONICO'S SUCCESSORS TO VOLSTEAD ACT

Delmonico's the most famous restaurant in the world, has closed its doors, following the example of the Knickerbocker, the Manhattan, the Churchill, the Claridge, Murray's, Hayley's and Roger's, all noted New York hotels and dining places. The habitation is generally blamed, though some say, with the closing of the restaurant that its last move from Broadway was a mistake because the old patrons did not follow. It seems likely that the hotels that survive in New York will be the sort of hotels that cater for visitors, while Child's that take care of the native population. Delmonico's was more than a restaurant; it was something like a club, something of a social centre, a place where the gazing visitors might see the world of fashion move, where there shone a fame that was world wide. Its name stood out like the name of Tiffany or Marshall Field. It was almost as celebrated as Broadway itself, and it existed for almost a century.

Founded by Swiss Chef

The first Delmonico was a Swiss chef, who arrived in New York in 1825 with $2 as capital and set up a little eating house. Apparently he was a good cook, for his place prospered. He sent back to Switzerland for more of his family to come and help him, and the city grew and the Delmonico became more fashionable, more of the tribe emigrated. Until the establishment at Fifth Avenue and Fourteenth Street closed its doors, Delmonico's was always in the hands of a member of the Delmonico family. Its first great boom came shortly after the close of the American civil war. It became the fashion to have tea or a meal at Delmonico's where a lady and gentleman before seen in New York, had established themselves. The restaurant shifted its sight more than half a dozen times, and always, with the possible exception of the last move, to its great advantage. The owners seemed to have an instinctive knowledge as to how the town was going to extend and managed to get their new premises before prices for real estate had become excessive. In the course of ninety-eight years, they must have rolled up a dozen fortunes for the various proprietors of the restaurant.

No Mere Lobster Palace

Delmonico's was not the expensive place that it was generally supposed to be by people who saw it for the first time. One could get a first-class meal for less than $2. Of course, if it were a special occasion Delmonico's was prepared to present a banquet that would cost $100 a plate. Such banquets, of course, would include vintage wines such as few American millionaires had in their cellars, and no doubt the chefs who personally interested themselves in these special occasions received salaries that were slipped the choice wines with every appearance of satisfaction. Dickens knew Delmonico's, and every president of the United States from Johnson to Roosevelt was entertained at one or other of the Delmonico restaurants. Richard Croker had always a table reserved, and so did Ward McAllister, leader or creator of the famous Four Hundred. It was at Delmonico's that Morse, inventor of the telegraph, received the honors of the nation. In other words, Delmonico's was one of the most cherished institutions of New York city cosmopolitan without being rowdy, brilliant and Bohemian without being dissipated, where the work of fashion, finance, politics, sport and art mingled and exchanged polite salutations.

The St. Paul's School Monthly Club commenced its series of addresses and lectures for the winter last Friday night, when Mayor McDonald gave a splendid address on Municipality and Citizenship. The concluding address will be given next March. If all the speakers attain the excellence of Mr. J. W. McDonald, an intellectual and instructive feast is in store for the club members.

The Bazaar and Turkey Supper given by the Ladies' Aid of the R.C. Church on Saturday afternoon and evening last was an unqualified success. The supper was excellent and was enjoyed by a record-breaking crowd. The affair was conducted with an informal dance. The prize-winners are as follows: George Kirton, (No. 1022) gold watch; J. Waugh, (No. 506) tea set; Ben Lee, (No. 1201) cash; and Mrs. J. Alexander, (No. 350) lamp; Mrs. K. Stines, (No. 814) table runner; J. Dickinson, (No. 1648) electric iron.

The Armistice Ball given under the auspices of the Macleod G. W. V. A. last Monday evening last was an extraordinary success in every particular. The hall was appropriately decorated with flags of the allied nations, and in conjunction with various gave a grand military setting for the gala occasion, and the lovely dresses displayed by many of the fair sex lent a softening charm. The fair was in perfect condition, and the music was excellent throughout the entire program—the Bremner orchestra supplying for the major portion of the music for the evening by voluntary local talent. The attendance exceeded 250 persons, and the supper was supplied by a bevy of town and spoke volunteers for the contributors' knowledge and practice of the culinary art. The G. W. V. A. feels that the success of the function was attributable in a great measure to the voluntary aid given so freely by the Association's many local friends and wish to express their appreciation of this kindly and efficient help.

ONLY A POPPY

Only a poppy on Flanders' Fields,
Only a single flower,
It stands today on a ruined grass,
Drenched with the blood of heroes' blood.

An emblem meek and holy,
Beneath it rots the dead men lie,
Their sightless eyes upturning,
They wait to rest on the cold earth's breast.

With naught but a comrade's mourning,
Yet though they died the strife goes on,
With warfare sad and gory,
While o'er their graves the poppy waves.

Memories of their glory,
The poppies nod and dip and bloom
Above that sacred sod
Where heroes fought in a cause that's wrought.

On the tablets of their God.
We come again, those hero men,
These stalwarts strong and brave,
And the grasses sigh as we rustle by
Over their unknown grave.

Only a poppy, yes, I know,
Only a simple bloom
That the Lord has sent for a moment—
To these heroes there in their tomb.

RED CROSS SEALS

The Alberta Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society has arranged for an issue of Christmas Stamps or Seals, which will be sold to raise funds for the Junior Red Cross Hospital in Calgary. These stamps are beautiful in design, attractive in color, and distinctly Canadian in their emblematic appeal. The good old stamps of the festive season of Christmas and the New Year are tastefully displayed around the emblems which are the Red Cross itself placed on a maple leaf. These stamps are ideal for placing on Christmas gifts to the Old Country. They bear the words "Junior Red Cross of Alberta." This will, it is hoped, awaken the interest of friends and others in the Junior Red Cross young people in the province, who are the proud pioneers of the movement for the care of cripples which has resulted in the well known institution "The Junior Red Cross Cripple Children's Hospital," the first of its kind in Canada. The cost of the stamps is one cent each, and they are obtainable from the Superintendent of Junior Red Cross, Beveridge Building, Calgary. It is hoped that everyone interested in Red Cross will do their best to further the sale of the stamps, knowing that by so doing they are making a most worthy contribution of the day. Secretaries of Societies are specially invited to order in bulk for their various organizations. No better method of making a Christmas offering in the spirit of the season can be suggested than one which will further the work of such an admirable institution as the Junior Red Cross Hospital. On the order one hundred stamps will be mailed to any address in the province. Please order early, address: Canadian Red Cross Society, Alberta Division, Beveridge Building, Calgary, Alta.
